

Codice Rosso (Law 69/2019) — Italy's Three-Day Fast-Track Prosecution for Gender-Based Violence

Gender Equality · Good practice · Italy

Quality score: 85/100

Evidence strength: Strong

Summary

Since 2019, Italian prosecutors must interview alleged victims of domestic and gender-based violence within three days of a police report. The resulting case surge strained prosecutors' offices, per a Council of Europe (GREVIO) review.

Key dimensions

Dimension	Score
Transferability / replicability	2/3
Impact on gender equality	1/1
Effectiveness	1/1
Efficiency	0/1
Evaluated outcomes	1/1
Sustainability	1/1
Achievement / evidence	1/1
Gender-mainstreaming embedding	1/1
Curator validation	1/1

Evaluated by C-NAPSE

Data sources

C-NAPSE web research — accessed 2026-09-25

Ministero della Giustizia \(Italian Ministry of Justice\) / Italian Parliament — accessed 2026-09-25

Council of Europe GREVIO first thematic evaluation report — accessed 2026-09-25

Library of Congress Global Legal Monitor — accessed 2026-09-25

Cite this — Evidoria. Codice Rosso (Law 69/2019) — Italy's Three-Day Fast-Track Prosecution for Gender-Based Violence. Persistent ID: 70e98de4-3e23-43ec-b8f5-34283d353410.