

Tunisia's Gender-Responsive Budgeting Reform — Institutionalised but Under 1% of Spending Reallocated

Gender Equality · Good practice · Tunisia

Quality score: 44/100

Evidence strength: Moderate

Summary

Tunisia's 2019 Organic Budget Law requires ministries to build performance budgets with gender-equity indicators. Ministries now produce gender-sensitive budget sheets, but an independent assessment found under 1% of public spending directly benefits women.

Key dimensions

Dimension	Score
Transferability / replicability	3/3
Impact on gender equality	0/1
Effectiveness	0/1
Efficiency	0/1
Evaluated outcomes	1/1
Sustainability	1/1
Achievement / evidence	0/1
Gender-mainstreaming embedding	1/1
Curator validation	0/1

Evaluated by C-NAPSE

Data sources

C-NAPSE web research — accessed 2026-09-28

Ministry of Finance / Ministry of Economy, Finance and Investment Support — Gender Budgeting Office \(GBO\) Unit, with UN Women and GIZ support — accessed 2026-09-28

Loi Organique n° 2019-15 du 13 février 2019 \(official legal text\) — accessed 2026-09-28

UNICEF Tunisia — Gender Analysis report \(2022\) — accessed 2026-09-28

GBO Tunisia — practical guide to gender-sensitive budgeting — accessed 2026-09-28

Cite this — Evidoria. Tunisia's Gender-Responsive Budgeting Reform — Institutionalised but Under 1% of Spending Reallocated. Persistent ID: 12e4410d-e290-4048-b1d4-6c76446c0af7.